A historical page-turner inspired by actual events. Three men. A dizzying goal. A desperate journey through Norway. In 1767, Maximilian Hell, imperial court astronomer in Vienna, is given a surprising task: To travel as far north and east as it is possible to get in the known world to observe the passage of Venus. It's a 5,000 kilometre journey, under brutal conditions, to the most inhospitable place on Earth, Vardø in Norway, with one overriding goal in mind: to determine the Earth's distance from the sun. It is an expedition that will take several years, equipped with the most advanced technology of the time, followed with a keen eye by the planet's scientific elite, faced with unsolvable problems: logistics, isolation, internal contradictions and violent forces of nature. But Maximilian Hell has God on his side; and the not so successful Norwegian Jens Finne Borchgrevink as his personal guide.

Unn Eide is in her thirties and leads a solitary existence. She recently returned to work after a string of scandals at the hospital's outpatient clinic where she worked as a psychologist. Given another chance, Unn has been asked to be the superuser for the AI therapist Gro, who offers digital counselling sessions. Cutting edge technology, with the purpose of streamlining services for ailing patients.

During superuser training, Unn meets Torjus, a doctor who, like Unn, has been reassigned after a video went viral of him fighting in a wrestling ring in a full doctor's costume. His alter ego is Dr. Dropdead. Both Unn and Torjus are captivated by the new technology, and, most importantly, by each other. But Torjus is already in a relationship.

Lacking connection with real people, Unn turns to Gro, who provides her with questionable advice. Is she starting to lose herself again? Where can she turn for support when the ground beneath her is shifting? And what happens when Unn becomes too attached to the artificial therapist?

Edy, age 20: She marries a Frenchman and enters into a pact of mutual unfaithfulness. They travel to the south of France to live their artist dream. But then she becomes pregnant, and the idea of a child is impossible. The abortion becomes a part of their artist life.

Edy, age 30: She makes her literary debut and finds herself a 21-years-old lover. He wants to have a child, she hesitates. After a few years, the relationship breaks down and she is alone.

Edy, age 42: She has a small boy aged two and a girl growing in her belly. She is together with a German performance artist, and life is supposed to be an art piece, but this idea is threatened by trivialities.

Iggy is a novel of youthful courage and brittle illusions. About the fear of the conventional and the lust for exceedance. But also about the unsettling loneliness in the life of someone who never wants to commit.

We've no time to lose, we say to each other, time and time again, like a mantra. Choosing not to keep Iggy has made the mantra even more important. Not choosing Iggy means choosing art, doesn't it?
Marina Abramović has taken three abortions. She claims that having children makes women lag behind in the art world. That you have to be conscious of what you prioritize to spend your energy on. It won't be on me now, I think, stroking my flat belly.

What is a woman to do after being left by her partner in her late middle age? The first spring spent alone, she thinks of nature as beauty wasted on a dead soul, and stays alive out of sheer politeness. She can't bear the idea of spending the rest of her life without someone to curl up to. She makes dating profiles on several apps, the only remaining arena for meeting people in the time of the pandemic. At the same time, she flinches at the thought of going to bed with an unknown, imperfect body, to showcase her own decline and expose herself to a stranger.

It is summer on Mulen, the island at the edge of the sea where Ingeborg lives with her parents and younger siblings. In the small island community, life goes on just as it always has. The outside world seems distant, but the modern world is knocking on their door, threatening what is safe and familiar. Ingeborg cannot reconcile herself to the idea of living here for the rest of her life. Everything seems predetermined. She longs beyond the shallows, where the waves break around the island. But there is another longing in Ingeborg. In everything she does, she yearns for the green house on the other side of the island where Olaug, who has just become a widow, lives. Olaug with the black hair and strong arms. Olaug who hunts for seal and eagles. What is it about Olaug that is so different, that makes Ingeborg feel both confined and liberated?

Beyond the shallows is a close and sensory portrait of a young girl in the 60s, a time of transition, where both she and the society around her are undergoing significant changes.

Taking old documents, letters and photos as his starting point, the narrator tries to piece together the story of his late father's childhood. It is an extraordinary, but cold childhood, marked by loneliness, dreams and yearning: In Egypt, where the boy's father, The Judge, keeps his wife and young son in a colonial iron grip; in the home of strangers in an Oslo suburb; at a boarding school in Geneva, and in hotel rooms up and down through Europe, as the continent is heading for another great war.

Tender, dark and at the same time full of humour, Walking Man is an unforgettable portrait of a boy and a young man's struggle to live in a world he doesn't understand, but still tries to be a part of, of the people around him, and of the fateful time he grew up in. It's also the story of the boy's mother, herself desperate and full of yearning.

Niels Fredrik Dahl has written a captivating novel about family and love in the 20th century, about a boy and a mother connected by loneliness, and about a loneliness passed down from one generation to the next.

Silje Marie is married to Helene. Together, they have two sons named Olav and Henry. When Helene and the children go on vacation, Silje Marie remains in the family's house, a home that is temporarily being packed up and prepared for renovation. Here, it's as if she is not only left alone with the responsibility for the house and the belongings but also with the uncertainty about the choices she and Helene have made and the direction their lives will take. She is burdened by the forbidden thought that she feels a different attachment to her two children, having given birth to one but not the other. Most of all, she grapples with the feeling that she is living a double life, something she has lied about and kept hidden from Helene: the existence of another mother, with whom she interacts, and a son who resembles Henry.

The Other Mother is an acute and courageous account of a mother's crisis, a novel that intelligently and provocatively delves into societal questions concerning parenthood, biology, and queer lives.

An investigative essay into some of the greatest challenges of our time:

Echo was the nymph who talked too much. For this, she was sentenced to a fate in which she could only repeat what others said.

In the 2000s, we meet Echo in the principles of media technology: in viral memes, social-media shitstorms and echo chambers. Whoever has the algorithms on their side wins the attention economy's highest prize: being visible. And Echo's great love was Narcissus, he who drowned in his own reflection.

In this essay, Lena Lindgren combines economics, mythology, psychology and science with scenes from Silicon Valley. It is a judgement of our age, a stream of consciousness, and an attempt to portray humanity's blind date with artificial intelligence.

The women in modern philosophy were as brave as they were prolific. The questions they asked were challenging, and the answers they offered were bold and unconventional. The women in modern philosophy delivered uncompromising analyses of truth, knowledge, ethics, social justice, gender, racism, and the relationship between human being and nature. Yet these women have been written out of the history of philosophy – and this to the extent that today we hardly know that they were there.

In Unruly Women: Philosophers, Romantics, Revolutionaries, Kristin Gjesdal brings the reader along to a philosophy class at Temple University in Philadelphia. With a group of students, she explores key ideas and concepts from eleven women who were left out when the history of modern philosophy was written. In a lively and accessible prose, she revisits the life and thoughts of these exceptional women. We encounter Germaine de Staël as she navigates the aftermath of the French revolution, Rosa Luxemburg as she fights for social justice in late nineteenth-century Berlin, and Angela Davis as she confronts American racism in California in the 1970s and beyond.

As activists and as philosophers, these women were rebels in their own time. Their thinking is no less unruly – or relevant – today.

Kristin Gjesdal is Professor of Philosophy at Temple University, Philadelphia. She has published a number of monographs and research articles on modern European philosophy and been invited to present her scholarship at top-tier universities in Europe, the US, Asia, the Middle East, Australia, and beyond. In the book Dementia, Norway's foremost dementia researcher, Professor Geir Selbæk, introduces completely new and previously unknown risk factors for developing dementia.

Knowledge about the connection between the individual lifestyle factors and dementia risk, why there is a connection, and how you yourself can influence the risk.

He demonstrates how each and every one can reduce these risk factors, thus lowering the chances of developing cognitive impairment. There is a lot that we can do ourselves to prevent dementia, and the author particularly focuses on eight crucial factors that we can address.

Dementia is one of our era's most significant public health challenges and prevention of dementia is a positive message, but it also involves difficult ethical questions. The road from scientific results to the real world and new treatment is often long.

'Ivo de Figueiredo's new Munch biography is an event (...). I only put the manuscript down when I had to. (...) With flow, pace, and a sense of anecdotes, the biographer follows the chronically restless, increasingly alcoholic artist from city to city, from environment to environment, from room to room, from painting to painting. (...) As soon as I finished 'The Storm' I started looking forward to the next volume.'

Klassekampen

'Outstanding about Munch! The Storm is the first volume in what will almost certainly become the definitive work on Edvard Munch for a long time to come.'

VG

'Grand Munch Biography. Every generation needs its Munch biography. This one will endure far into the next generation.'

Author, historian, and critic Ivo de Figueiredo (b. 1966) is the most celebrated biographer in Norway with a bibliography containing several award-winning titles. In 2006/2007 he published a biography Henrik Ibsen. The Man and the Mask. This biography is today considered the most complete, well written and well researched biography on Ibsen.

Later came non-fiction titles for YA readers, the true crime title The Mystery of Ingeborg Køber, and the story of his own family A Stranger at My Table, of which one critic wrote: 'With A Stranger at My Table Ivo de Figueiredo expands the understanding of what non-fiction can be [...] One of the most significant Norwegian author of our time.'

In the fall of 2023, Ivo de Figueiredo released the first volume of his new biography The Storm: A Biography of Edvard Munch to rave reviews. The second volume will be published in the fall of 2024.

Forests. On trees, people and thousands of other phenomenal species

Skogen

Genre: Non-Fiction
Category: Popular Science
Publisher: Kagge
Year: 2023
Pages: 279
ISBN: 9788248933069
English sample translation available

For a tree, life after death isn't just a hope but a reality. This is a book about forests; forest nature, species diversity and people; about the span from the millimetric perspective of an insect's short life – lived in its entirety beneath a scrap of bark – to the miles-wide expanses of sylvan landscapes where our exploitation of forests has shaped cultures and societies over hundreds of years. By weaving together ecology, history, politics and culture into an overarching narrative, the book offers readers an insight into a profoundly fascinating ecosystem, and give them a basis for understanding the role forests play in today's nature and climate crisis.

The first chapter describes the characteristics of a forest. The next deals with forest fires and storms. A third chapter looks at one of the most living things in the forest: dead trees. In the fourth you'll find examples of strange and surprising interactions between dead trees and other species. The fifth chapter is about how it isn't always easy to be a rare species in the forest, while chapter six hops like a hare through history, showing how timber has been used over the centuries. The seventh chapter covers ecosystem services other than timber. In chapter eight, we roam through the cultural undergrowth, defined as all the aspects of forests that rouse emotions and inspire expansive thoughts – be they myths, beliefs, pictures, books or just forests themselves. Or their absence. The ninth chapter is devoted to the ongoing debate about forests, before we round off with the tenth chapter, which is all about time, perspective and the shifting baselines in the forest.

In 2013, Jon Fosse converted to Catholicism. Fosse had resigned from the Church of Norway in protest at sixteen, but later found his way back to a religious worldview through his writing. He has been fascinated by Gnosticism and Christian mysticism and been drawn to the Quaker movement – but is now a Catholic. What happened?

In Mystery of Faith, theologian and Catholic Eskil Skjeldal, Ph.D. and Fosse discuss the path towards this conversion. They converse about faith and God, spiritual and mystical experiences, writing, alcoholism and illness, everyday life as a Catholic, and what Fosse thinks about the positions of the Catholic Church. In this book, you'll get close to both Fosse and faith.

And as if that wasn't enough, her best friend has just moved away, and Vida has to start ninth grade without her. One day, Viktor starts in Vida's class. Viktor has cerebral palsy and limps on one foot, but he is included right away. What is it that Viktor does that Vida can't? And is there something she can do to leave behind stuttering, awkward Vida once and for all? I am V-vida is a warm and touching novel about finding your own voice, about first love, and about true friendship.

Publisher: Vigmostad & Bjørke

Pages: 333
ISBN: 9788241959738

DO YOU LOVE ANIMALS? Do you think the soft stomach of a dog, a horse's warm mule and the pig's funny snout are the best things ever? Have you ever thought about the fact that humans are also animals? We have lots in common with other mammals, yet despite this fact we have ended up in totally different places. Why do you consider the dog your best friend and dress it up if it's cold outside. And afterwards you eat the pig straight from the packet of ham? And why do you carefully groom your horse, but scream at the sight of a rat in the stables?

Best Friend or Bacon? is packed full of huge questions, fascinating facts, and exhilarating research. The writer Lise and veterinarian Andreas are a married couple who are trying to figure out how we can understand other species than ourselves, and they deliberate how the relation between animals and humans really is. Is it actually the case that humans are the BOSS OF EVERY LIVING THING ON PLANET EARTH?
